50X1-HUM

1. The clock tower on the Kremlin wall. Note the exit where vehicles drive out of the Kremlin. When a vehicle is to come out the bell rings continuously for about ten seconds before the vehicle appears.
- 2-3. The Kremlin wall photographed from the same position as above.
- 4-5. Red Square showing the Museum at the far end and the Kremlin wall on the left.
- 6-8. The entrance to the St. Basil Cathedral. This building is painted in red, white, green and gold, predominantly.
9. Living room of US visitor's suite at the Moscow Hotel. Notice radio and television set.
10. The opposite end of the same living room.
11. The bedroom of same suite.
12. Corner of living room in same suite.
- 13-14. The bathroom of a room in Moscow Hotel.
- 15-17. School children in Moscow.
18. A tower at the corner of the Kremlin wall. The Moscow River is on the right.
19. View of the palaces in the Kremlin, probably from the same position as above.
- 20-21. Looking along the Moscow River in the opposite direction to that shown in #19.
22. View of the Kremlin from the same bridge from which the previous four pictures were taken.
23. View of the Kremlin from across the river.
- 24-25. People boating on the Moscow River on a Sunday.
26. Line of Russian people waiting to enter the Tretyzkov Gallery.
27. Vicinity of the Tretyzkov Gallery.
28. Street corner in Moscow.
29. Advertising sign in Moscow. Advertising signs were rather uncommon, but this one was photographed in part because of the old fashioned nature of the phonograph that was advertised. Note the newspaper case at lower left.
30. View toward St. Basil Cathedral taken from the same position as #29.
